

Dino Days

Leo held tight to his special time-travel watch, his eyes growing wide as sparkles swirled around him. 'Wow!' he gasped as colors whizzed past. 'I can't believe this is happening!' The world spun and twisted until suddenly everything became still. Leo found himself standing in a lush, green prehistoric jungle. 'I really did it,' he whispered. 'I traveled back in time!'

As Leo explored the jungle, he heard a small squeak coming from behind a giant fern. 'Hello?' he called softly. 'Is someone there?' A tiny head poked out - it was a baby T-Rex! 'Oh, don't be scared,' Leo said gently. The baby dinosaur tilted its head curiously. 'I'm Leo. Would you like to be friends?'

The baby T-Rex took a few wobbling steps forward. 'I think I'll call you Rex,' Leo smiled. Rex let out a happy chirp and nuzzled Leo's hand. 'You're not scary at all!' Leo laughed. Just then, they heard rustling from nearby bushes. 'What's that?' Leo wondered.

A baby Triceratops emerged, looking nervous. 'Hey there, little one,' Leo called softly. Rex hid behind Leo's legs. 'It's okay, Rex. Let's make a new friend!' The Triceratops took tiny steps closer. 'I'll call you Tops,' Leo decided. 'We can all play together!'

At first, Rex and Tops stayed far apart. 'Watch this!' Leo said, picking up a large leaf. He spun around, making both dinosaurs giggle. 'See? We can have fun together!' Rex and Tops moved a little closer, watching Leo dance with the leaf.

Leo found some bright berries and shared them between his new friends. 'These are yummy, aren't they?' he asked. Rex and Tops nodded, moving closer to each other as they munched. 'Good sharing!' Leo praised. 'That's what friends do!'

When they finished their snack, Leo suggested playing hide-and-seek. 'I'll count, and you both hide!' he said. Rex and Tops looked at each other, then scampered off together, giggling. Leo smiled, seeing them help each other find the perfect hiding spot.

The afternoon flew by with games and laughter. Rex and Tops discovered they made excellent climbing partners, helping each other up small rocks while Leo cheered them on. 'You two are amazing together!' Leo clapped. The dinosaurs beamed with pride.

As the sun began to set, the three friends sat together watching colorful prehistoric birds soar overhead. 'Being different doesn't matter when you're friends,' Leo said softly. Rex and Tops snuggled closer to him, making happy sounds of agreement.

Leo's watch began to glow, signaling it was time to go home. 'I'll never forget you both,' he said, giving each dinosaur a gentle hug. Rex and Tops rubbed their heads against him affectionately. 'Promise you'll stay friends?' The dinosaurs nodded eagerly.

The sparkles returned, swirling around Leo. He waved goodbye as Rex and Tops stood side by side, their tails entwined in friendship. 'Best adventure ever!' Leo called as the prehistoric world began to fade. The last thing he saw was his dinosaur friends playing together.

Back in his room, Leo smiled at his watch. He knew somewhere in time, a T-Rex and Triceratops were the best of friends, all because they learned to look past their differences. 'Sometimes,' Leo thought, 'the best friendships come from the most unexpected places.'
